

ANOTHER 90-DAY EXTENSION OF 10% CHINA IEEPA RECIPROCAL TARIFFS (August 12, 2025)

With the current IEEPA Reciprocal Tariffs 10% rate on products of China, Hong Kong, and Macau scheduled to expire at 12:01 am Eastern Daylight Time (EDT) on August 12, President Trump issued a new Executive Order late on August 11 that extends the current 10% Reciprocal Tariffs rate another 90 days to 12:01 am EDT on November 10, 2025. President Trump states in the EO that the suspension is “necessary and appropriate” because China continues to take significant steps toward remedying non-reciprocal trade arrangements and addressing U.S. economic and national security matters. The White House also posted a U.S.-China Joint Statement confirming the 10% China reciprocal tariff rate, suspension of China-specific 24% rate, and China continuing its retaliatory 10% rate and suspending its 24% rate on U.S. products. A later-released Customs CSMS message confirms continued use of the same HTSUS subheading 9903.01.25 tariff classification for importers to declare the 10% Reciprocal Tariffs rate.

Clients are reminded that this extension only applies to the IEEPA Reciprocal Tariffs on products of China (including Hong Kong and Macau) imported into the United States. Products of China are still separately subject to 20% China IEEPA Fentanyl tariffs and may also be subject to China Section 301 additional tariffs.
